Keeping her eye out for edgy accessories, Ilaria Urbinati stays ahead of the fashion pack: verexposed fashion doesn't appeal to Ilaria Urbinati. Instead, Urbinati, the 26-year-old buyer for the L.A. boutique Milk, is always on the hunt for streetwear-inspired pieces and edgy cult labels—for herself and for her shop. So what has she sleuthed out this season? Candace Ang's punky jewelry ("Her animal necklaces are insane!"), sleek Pollini riding boots ("I scouted all the equestrian boots out there and theirs are the best by far"), and Derek Lam's luxe new bag line ("I haven't seen anything else like it!"). Occasionally she'll go for certain big-name pieces or classic styles, but only if they appeal to her eccentric aesthetic. "I love Ray-Ban's Aviator shades—they're very Michael Douglas in Falling Down," she says. "And this season I'm coveting a leather zipper jacket—something like what Emmanuelle Seigner wore in Roman Polanski's Frantic." —S.C.
